STORY OF PRISONER WHO DENIES GRIME; HORRIBLE MISTAKE'

Arthur Mullinax, White Youth Held By the Police, Declares the Only Time He Ever Met Mary Phagan Was in a Church Play.

Arthur Mullinax, identified as the man, who was with Mary Phagan at midnight Saturday, a few short hours before her dead body was found, and now a prisoner in solitary confinement at police headquarters, declared to a Georgian reporter that his ar rest was a terrible mistake.

He declared that he had never seen the girl except as "the sleeping beauty" in a church entertainment in which both took part last Christmas. Here is his complete story:

"I had absolutely no connection with this affair and have been wrongfully accused. Sentell is horribly mistaken when he says he saw me in company with Mary Phagan shortly after midnight Sunday morning in Forsyth Street. I did not even know the girl-that is, never had been introduced to herand had never been anywhere with her in my life.

WHITE YOUTH AND NEGRO ARE HELD BY THE POLICE

After Being Beaten Into Insensibility Child Was Strangled and Dragged With Cord Back and Forth Across Floor---Incoherent Notes a Clew.

Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the National Pencil Company plant, in which Mary Phagan was employed, was taken to police court this morning by Detective Black to tell what he knows in connection with the girl's death. The police say he is not un-

At the same time Geron Bailey, the negro elevator boy employed in the factory, was arrested. One theory names Bailey as the man to whom the incoherent letters apply that were found by the side of the dead girl, and that evidently were written in an ef fort to describe her assailant.

Policemen Mack. Philips and Starnes went to the factory this morning upon the statement that blood and matted hair, evidence of a terrible struggle had been found on the third floor of the factory. It was on this visit that they summoned Frank and arrested

They conducted a minute investigation of the signs of the struggle of the third floor, going so far as to tear up several sections of the plank flooring in their inspection.

A new and terrifying turn was given the gruesome Mary Phagan strangling mystery to-day when strands of blood-matted hair were found in a lathing machine on the third floor of the National Pencil Company's factory, 37-39 South Forsyth Street.

The discovery made it certain that the dreadful crime was committed in the factory by some one who had access to the building, a theory which had been without conclusive support pre-

Blood stains leading from the lathe to the door showed the manner in which the fiend had dragged the body of his victim and had taken her to the basement.

Appearances indicated that the murderer had sought to cover up the trail of his crime by endeavoring to efface the bloody stains. Another name was brought into the case to-day by the testimony of pencil company employees. Detectives were hurried to the building and an arrest is expected momentarily. The new suspect is said to be a former employee who was seen about the building Friday and Saturday. The blood-matted strands of reddish-brown hair were discovered this forenoon when L. A. Quinn, foreman in the top plant on the third floor, sent R. P. Barrett, a workman, over to the lathe.

Barrett gave a cry of alarm when he saw the evidences of the shocking crime and of the struggle the little girl apparently had made against the superior strength of her assailant.

The hair was twisted about the turn-up screw on the lathe, a crank-like device which is used to move the pencils forward and, backward on the machine.

Blood was on the sharp end of the crank, leading to the belief that it had been used as a weapon and was responsible for the bloody gash in the back of the Phagan girl's head. The alternative theory is that she fell back against it in her struggles.

Evidence of Terrible Struggle

The mutilated body of Mary Phagan was found in a dark, dismal corner of the pencil factory basement shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday morning by Newt Lee, the negro night watchman. The negro said he almost stumbled against the body before he saw it,

GIRL FOUGHT DESPERATELY IN PITCH-DARK BASEMENT FOR HONOR AND HER LIFE

In the dim, flickering light of the watchman's lantern, the tragedy was revealed in all its ghastliness.

The girlish form lay amid the trash and sweepings of the basement with bruised and bloody face upturned, in a pool of blood, and with the spotless and freshly-laundered dress of but a few hours before dyed crimson. The disheveled hair was blood-soaked from the great gaping wounds on the head.

All about was the evidence of a teriffic struggle. The dilapidated condition of the dead girl's clothing and the signs of confusion on the dirty basement floor told the tragic story of the girl's

Fought Slayer Till She Swooned

She had fought her brutal murderer until the last-until her strength had given out and she had swooned into death.

The body lay at a point about 75 feet from an elevator shaft. Midway between the body and the shaft, on a pile of trash, was found one of the girl's shoes-the one from her left foot-and her hat. So ferocious was the slayer that he had torn the shoe and hat from the little form as the girl struggled vainly to save herself from his deadly blows.

About the girl's neck was tightly drawn a strong piece of twine. A strip of cloth, torn from her underclothing, was also fastened about the neck. Not satisfied with the blows he had dealt on the head-one blow on the back of the head being so terrific as to discolor one of the girl's eyes-the slayer had resorted to strangulation to be sure that the last spark of life had been extinguished. A big twine had been drawn so tightly that it was imbedded in the tender flesh, leaving the throat and neck discolored

Strange Notes Increase Mystery

A few inches from the body were found two remarkably strange notes. These notes, incoherent and almost illegible, only serve to increase the mystery. Detectives declared there was no doubt but that these notes were written by the murderer and were a feeble and tragically grotesque effort at a ruse. They purport to have been written by the girl, and the wording would seem to indicate that she had written them after she was in the

"A tall, black negro did this," is the substance of the two

The notes are in the hands of detectives, who believe they may prove to be valuable clews.

The police were notified by the janitor of his ghastly find, and several officers were quickly on the scene, immediately starting a thorough investigation.

After finding that all of the doors and windows to the building were securely fastened, the police took Newt Lee into custody on suspicion, believing that he could throw light on the tragedy Lee carried the keys to the building, but protested that he had admitted no one to the building, and that he had no idea that anyone had been inside until he found the body.

Detectives are certain that the negro can explain the mystery of how the girl found her way into the building, even if he did not actually commit the murder.

Negro Pleads Total Ignorance

The negro's sole statement to detectives since his arrest has

"I didn't know nothing about it until I found the body. Detectives, however, declare the locked doors and windows render this statement unreasonable

The negro was put through a grilling examination time and again Sunday and last night, but no amount of questioning could induce him to change his "know nothing" statement. To every question he replied:

'I don't know nothing about it."

Detectives are sure the negro has not told all he knows, and will hold him until the mystery is cleared.

The theory that the crime was the work of a negro held full sway and was assiduously followed by detectives until Sunday afternoon when E. L. Sentell, of 82 Davis Street, a clerk for the Kamper Grocery Company, divulged the information that he saw Mary Phagan at Forsyth and Hunter Streets Sunday morn ng about 12:30 o'clock in company with Arthur Mullinax. H seid they were walking in the direction of the pencil factory, which is but a few doors from this corner. Sentell knew the Phagan girl, and said he spoke to her as he passed. that the crime was committed by a negro, and that it was the

Since then, detectives have been working on both theoriesjob of a white man and that the negro watchman is an accomplice

This gave a new angle to the mystery and set detectives on the trail of Mullinax, who was found late in the afternoon and placed under arrest on suspicion.

Sentell, a well-known young man, had known Mary Phagan almost all her life. When she was just beginning to think of dolls with never a thought of dreary factories and the tragedles of life, he used to see her playing in the streets of East Point when her folks lived there. She was a pleasant, cheerful little girl then and her later years—tragically brief—had not changed her. Her light blue eyes laughed at the world in those days with all the roguishness a Georgia country girl's can, and the cares and worries that came when she had to make her own pitiful living had not obliterated their smile. It was 30 minutes after midnight, when Sentell, going home from his work at Kamper's saw Mary Phagan coming down Forsyth Street near Hunter.

Outside of the stragglers about the cheap hotels in that district, there were few on the streets at that time. The intermittent lights of cheap fruit and soda water stands, the flickering flame of a whistling peanut roaster here and there, added enough light.

and soda water stands, the flickering that he knew the little girl and that flame of a whistling peanut roaster here and there, added enough light to the duil glow of the city lamps to make pedestrians easily distinguishable.

To Sentell, Mary Phagan looked as if she was tired or angry. That the man of mystery was her companion he had no doubt. As Sentell described him later to the police:

STOCKEXCHANGE GOVERNORS ARE CLEANING HOUSE

But Public Hostility to Wall Street and Its Business Is Still Rampant.

BY B. C. FORBES. The New York Stock Exchange governors are manifesting unprecedented vigilance. They have done more real housecleaning than the public realize. The suspension last week of two members is significant of the new order. The Exchange also probed a complaint against an important banking house, but did not find that the facts warranted repri-

The Hearst papers have vigorously advocated Stock Exchange reform. They have also insisted again and again upon a fuller measure of publicity. But the managers of the Stock Exchange have no control whatever over non-members. This point is too often forgotten.

The Stock Exchange cannot make men honest. Governments have been trying to do that for centuries, but human nature has remained human Bound by the tie of grief in death, several hundred men, women and children made up an odd procession to Oakland Cemetery this morning. They were members of the tribe of nomad Irish horse traders, known every-

Public hostility to Wall Street is still rampant. Several recent incidents have not tended to allay it. Numbers of newer industrial stocks have been handled disgracefully by insiders. Outsiders have lost heavily. Whether the Exchange authorities—or the Federal authorities—can do anything to stop such filmflamming is an open question.

A correspondent has seen a lengthy communication which is illustrative of how a good many people feel toward Wall Street. He berates me for not scolding Wall Street enough, for not "going for" Albany politicians and for once in a while discussing the better side of human nature. He refers to the manipulation of certain newer shares on the Stock Exchange, and then adds: and then adds:

and then adds:

"This dirty finance is, in my judgment by far the most important question before the American people to-day. It seems to pervade all classes of bankers, promoters and corporation officials. Every piece of news is "discounted" on the Stock Exchange, which is only another way of saying that the insiders have played their official knowledge against the stockholders and the public. Juggling of figures for the benefit of officials, speculating in the stocks of their companies, is so common as to be almost the rule; and Wall Street smiles indulgently, as who should say, "Yes; it's crooked but it's part of the game."

"The Stock Exchange appears helpless. It does not dare to discipline any of the "big men," because it is absolutely dependent on the co-operation of the banking houses and directors of the principal corporations for its existence.

"A few years ago, when Mr. Harriforday have not served to less to have given out an interview in In the long line of carriages which he said, 'Mr. Harriman is practany women who crooned and tically a well man.' This enabled a tically a well man.' This enabled a rally in Union Pacific to about 211: wept. Very young children were frightened and quiet, older children frankly crying. No Expense Spared.

The tribe, reputed to be wealthy, spares no expense in the burial of its dead. The caskets were elaborate and costly, he hearses were luxuriantly fitted, and every other appointment of the ceremony was in keeping.

The tribe members probably will tribe members probably will has never been since? has never been since?

"While the standard of morality in Wall Street is so low, it is useless to hope for improvement from within. This financial clique has shown itself at the last of April, when the same solemn occasion will come, and the same tie of death will be revealed. It is the one tie among the members, and it keeps them close together in heart.

"But the real vital issue is plain honesty; reforming conditions, after all, only reforming the machinery. We must find means of compelling honest and disinterested service in the directors of our large corporations, and plain honesty in the officers of our bank."

Well some of us have been trying our best to preach honesty, and to criticise dishonesty. But miracles cannot be wrought in the twinkling of an eye. It is some consolation to know that the trend is in the right

Mothers should question them and ask them about their work associates and surroundings. They should continually tell them what they ought to do, and how they ought to act under certain circumstances."

Girl Liked Work.

She declared that she never would have permitted Mary to go out to work at the age she did-12 years-if it hadn't been that there were five children in the family and it was absolutely necessary for all of them to earn something toward their support. That was before she married her present husband, Mr. Coleman.

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN'S GREAT BASEBALL TEAM

All the important leagues of baseball are now in action. So are tens of thousands of fans. So are also the men who write of the doings of the diamond stars for those same fans to read.

It is the newspaper with the STAR TEAM of writers that makes the strongest appeal to baseball enthusiasts.

BUT—to be stars, baseball players and writers about the diamond warriors must be fair and square. That is an essential part of KNOWING

JOE AGLER—The Crackers' sensational first-sacker. He is giving local fans all the "inside" news of Billy Smith's aggregation. His comments on plays are immense.

W. S. FARNSWORTH—His stories of the big league teams are right up to the minute. Having traveled with the New York Yankees, New York Giants and Boston Red Sox during the past seven years, he is able to tell of the "workings" of the major league clubs.

PERCY H. WHITING—For over seven years he has been writing Southern League baseball. He is the dean of Southern diamond experts and has the largest following this side of the Mason and Dixon line. He is fearless in his writings and always tells the truth.

SAM CRANE—A big league ball player for years and personally acquainted with all the major leaguers. For the past twenty years he has been writing baseball and is considered the greatest student of the game in the world. He travels with the National League Champion Giants.

DAMON RUNYON—The wittiest baseball writer in the East. He tells of the big league games in a manner that has a laugh in every line. But he never gets away from baseball like most of the humorous followers of the diamond warriors.

W. J. McBETH—His "inside" stories of big league games cannot be beaten. He sticks to facts and figures and his predictions are followed by thousands of fans. He has traveled as "war correspondent" with nearly every big league team during the past ten years.

CHARLEY DRYDEN—The Mark Twain of baseban. For years he has traveled with New York, Philadelphia and Chicago teams and his writings are baseball classics. He is personally acquainted with every big league player and probably has the largest following of any baseball expert in the

In the General Sporting Field

As well as in baseball, The Sunday American scores an exceptionally large number of base hits in all other branches of sports.

Ben Adams, hero of the Olympic games, writes interesting stories about track and field athletics. The boxing world is well covered by Ed W. Smith, W. W. Naughton, H. M. Walker, Ed Curley and "Left Hook." Tick Tichenor takes care of the golf. He knows every golfer in the South and his stories are real live "bearcats." Tennis and automobiles are two other branches of sport that are covered thoroughly in The Sunday American.

"The effect on the Exposition Mills will be indirect. The competition in the finer yarns, where the proposed cut is greatest, will force American spinners into the coarser, which will increase our competition.

"In general, yarns from 16 to 20 are considered coarse, from 20 to 40, medium and from 40 on, fine.

CENTRAL WINS BY WRECK JURY

Railway Has Citizens' Committee Investigate and Help Place Blame for Accidents.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Central of Georgia has inaugurated a plan of investigating wrecks in which persons are injured that is meeting with great favor along its routes, and winning for it many frank expressions of appropriation and commentation.

Recently a passenger train was de-railed at Lovejoy, and the Central promptly called in a committee of cit-izens, selected from the immediate vicinity of the wreck, to assist in clearing up the blame in so far as it might be cleared up. This board, after a fair inquiry, de-

This board, after a fair inquiry, decided that the wreck came about through a broken rail, and the road accepted the verdict as just and right. Not only has this greatly pleased the people affected by this wreck, which was a relatively small one, but it has made them more friendly to the road than ever before. They say they never will have any trouble getting along if the road meets them in ting along if the road meets them in that sort of spirit always.

It is understood that the Central proposes to adopt this plan whenever most daring of the aviation corps, can in the future, and there can be little doubt it will make for a better and more cordial understanding be-tween the road and the public. In every Georgia Legislature there is a contingent of anti-railroad legislators, ready to back any old thing that has an anti-railroad twist. Many of these more recovered to the control of the control that has an anti-railroad twist. Many of these mcn are persons who have come in contact once or twice with the railroads in their old-time secretiveness concerning wrecks.

Whereas it used to be the policy of the roads to close up like clams whenever a wreck occurred and to tell nothing, they now are insisting upon telling just as much as they can tell. By inviting citizens to assist them in getting at the truth, and roads are able to establish the facts in a non-partisan way, and the resulting story of the wreck is accepted as the truth of it.

Major Claude C. Smith. Judge Advocate General of the Georgia National Guard, announces that the following bills will be introduced in the next General Assembly:

First, a law to provide for a change of yenue in trial of capital cases where there is danger of mob violence; second, a bill to change the place of execution, when mob violence is teared; third, a bill to empower the Governor to remove a Shediff from office, when such official fails of his entire duty to the State in time of riot or moo violence.

Hearst's Sunday American offers a series of College Pennants. The subjects will be different from those pictured above, but equally as attractive. These are 12x30 inches in size, durably made of wool-felt with heavily embossed felt letters, and reproduce, in a highly artistic manner, the color and the seal or mascot of some great university.

Choice of two subjects now ready: Georgia Tech and Georgia University. Others will be announced later.

Pennants are ready for distribution by newsdealers, everywhere, and at both of the Hearst's Sunday American offices, 20 East Alabama St. and 35 Peachtree St. NO PENNANTS CAN BE DELIVERED WITHOUT PRESENTATION OF THIS COUPON. IT IS IMPORTANT THAT YOU REMEMBER THIS.

Four and Twenty Songbirds Hailed With Tearful Joy

It is recorded that Pasquale Amato, when he was served a dish of sweetbreads prepared by Joseph Gancel, solemnly arose, found his way into the steaming kitchen at the eGorgian Terrace, and as solemnly embraced its creator, Monsieur Joseph Gancel will tell you frankly that he cannot sing, nor does he want to. Being chef at the Georgian Terrace, and as solemnly to stifle the muse of song.

And yet there is a common tie be tween him and the stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He, too is an artist. The estheticism of his soul was stirred when Caruso and Bori and the others came to Atlanta and to the Georgian Terrace last week, and out of the turmoil were evolved artistic creations of his kitchen. The presence of his fellow artists inspir ed him, and here are some of the results, a few of the dishes that h prepared, for them and for them alone. To every opera of the week he respectfully dedicated a new dish. FILET OF SOLE, MANON LESCAUT: Rase filet of sole in heart shape, and cooked in sauterne wine. Dress the dish in a border of duchess Dress the dish in a border of duchesse potatoes, the bottom garnished with cooked fresh green asparagus tips and julienne of truffle. Put the filet of sole on top, cover with Normandie sauce with lobster butter and glaze. They say that the grand operastars sang better for Atlanta than before the diamond horseshee of the Metropolitan Opera House. Is there any wonder.

the sweetbreads the same as for larded or glazed form. Put in individual cocottes filled with the bottoms of artichokes and puree of foie gras, the sweetbreads being placed on top. Garnish with small heads of cocked fresh musarooms. Put in the over for four minutes, cover with Gancel's Triumph.

It was when Pasquale Amato sat down before this dish, and tasted it that he arose solemnly, found his way into the klighen, and as sol-emnly embraced Joseph Gancel.

Soils mingled at the Georgian Terrace, the souls of artists. Purveyors to different organs they were, it is true, but affinities in art. Witness "I do not care what happens now.

MIGNON OF TENDERLOIN, CY-RANO DE BERGERAC: After the mignon is prepared and cooked on one side, prepare and stuff as follows: puree of chicken and fole gras, half and half. One ring of anchovies and stuffed olives on top. Put in oven for a few minutes. Provencale is sauce on the bottom of the dish. Garnish on the crown with souffle potatoes.

"He has the appreciation, the knowledge," exclaimed the chef. The grand opera stars felt somewhat the same way about it, and Caruso generally ordered for twelve. Those of his party were Lucrezi Bori, Toscanini, Mr. and Mrs. Amato, Scognamigillo, his accompanist, Segurola, Scotti, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reiss, Mr. and Mrs. Pini-Corsi.

It must be confessed that Caruso reopens with a matinee this afternoor It must be confessed that Caruso had some trouble about the spaghetti before he mixed it himself. Something about the spaghetti that he was served in restaurants around Atlanta was not au fait. Something there was, just a suspicion sometimes, too much or too little. His palate detected always the trouble. So Saturday afternoon he called for ten pounds of the finest spaghetti, imported from his own Italy. He called for the tomato and garlic sauce that is made in New York alone. He called for Parmesan cheese, and with them all in hand, he doffed his coat. "BILLY THE KID" AT THE LYRIC.

could be plainer in the world than Luther McCarty's position than Luther McCarry's position regarding a match with Jess Willard, the elongated Kansan, who has been camping on the McCarty-McCarney heels for a long time now. In a letter here McCarney, the managerial brains of the confederacy, makes the flat statement that Jess can have the match, and gladly as far as McCarty is concerned, as soon as some promatch, and gladly as far as McCarty is concerned, as soon as some promoter offers a purse of reasonable size for the affair. "We never have received a single definite offer of a match with Willard and therefore never could accept or reject him," McCarney says. "This is the straight dope on Willard."

M ANY of the critics have been giving McCarney a touch of high life and making his burden the harder to carry by accusing him of sidestepping the big man from Kansas. McCarty has been accused of dodging Willard because of the ten-round bout in New York between the pair, the opinion being after that was over that Willard had had the shade. But it appears now that McCarty would All Charlie Ebbets needs to make his that Willard had had the shade. But it appears now that McCarty would be only too willing to get the chance to wipe out that stain and give Willard the chance of putting a black mark on the McCarty record. But if McCarty's statement is truthful, and there isn't a reason on earth to think otherwise, nobody has bid seriously for such a meeting. Can it be that it will need a lot of Tom Jones' very best brand of arguments to wake up the men who make the bids and get some sort of a tangible offer for this meeting.

THE baseball association recognized the need for a new short stop just as quickly as the fans didant they have a new one ready for a try-out to-day. If he does not work, well, still another will be bought.

If the new man, Williams, comes through there is only one source of worry—the slab department.

An odd thing about the team is that the catching department, that looked as though it were going to be weak, has proved strong. Pat Graham has converted us all and has demonstrated class that makes him look the best young catcher in the league. And Joe Dunn, supposed to be ready for the punk pile, has turned up as chipper as a cricket and is playing good ball. Both Dunn and Graham are hitting above their stride and their throwing to second has been most amazing.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Investigations having spread over the country like the prickly heat or eczema within the last few years, there is now country like the prickly heat or eczema within the last few years, there is now some talk of the legislators looking into the so-called baseball trust that prevents a player from signing with another club if he is dissatisfied with the conditions of the team to which he belongs. This whole question hinges on the reserve clause, an instrument that has been termed unjust by many baseball authorities.

So far as I can see, such an investigation would not benefit the players, because it would tend to destroy the interest in baseball. The purpose of the reserve clause is to keep a man from jumping from one team to another that offers him more money, which jumping would destroy the present enthusiasm over baseball.

He often had such pains in his stomach that he would be in an agony from which it was hard to recover. His stomach would bloat fearfully. He was at times so nauseated at the sight of foods that he could not eat. He kept getting weaker and weaker. He was in a miserable condition. Money was spent by Mr. Backus in his trials for relief, and many different remedies were used, but all he got in the way of results was a little temporary relief. Of this he finally tired, and made up his mind to make one more effort in his endeavors to find a cure. He called at the Coursey & Munn drug store, and, after explaining his case, decided to purchase a treatment, which was four bottles, as it had done so much good work in this city. He began using the Quaker Extract into this city."

To-day's Complete Short Story

T had seemed to me at the lime that I could do the thing in cutire safe-ty. Our troops were ordered out to take and destroy a village which lay operations would be confined to the lower ground. The heights above would be entirely untroubled, unoccupied.

And so I had gained these, after walk ng five miles over gentle slopes of short sorub grass, and then had lain me down on the ridge and watched the skirmish ing, the attack, and the capture through pair of glasses.

From a distance it had all seems very tame. There were little puffs gray smoke, men fell, others came of at run, zigzagging in and out in entire disorder, made their weapons and accontrements glitter in the sun, and they

More smoke arose in puffs from the lanes between the houses. And then a stream of Black Flag Chinese began to pour out at the run, some of them pitched forward and lay still, and the others limped and lagged behind the general pace; and quite irregular crackle from the village, like the burning of brush-wood, told me what was causing these things.

But when the Balck Flags were out of range and the firing ceased the val-ley dropped into dread quietude and there was nothing more to see. I yawned over it for another half-hour and then walked a dozen yards down the slope, smoked a couple of cigarettes and began my dejeuner. The regiment of Black Flags which came down upon me must have started climbing the hill face the

Beyond a doubt the most cowardly Frenchman in the East that moment was myself. I did not attempt to controvert this fact; I ran on, cringing from every bullet that rustled past me or spuried up the ground beside my leaping feet; but I sought to find exuses for my conduct.

For good behavior they had raised me from the ranks to a non-commissioned officer.

How long I ran on in this blinded state I cannot tell; but a sharp sting of pain set my wits a-going. It felt like the sear of hot metal burning and frying, and the hurt came somewhere from the round of the left shoulder. instantly my mood woke again. For were yelping and firing in chase; and as I scurried on, and the ill-aimed bullets threw their rushing halo of sound around my head and limbs, this in-creased to a wild, poisonous hate.

Remembered My Revolver.

Then, for the first time, I remen bered my revolver. With bungling lingers I unholstered it, and, turning, fired six rapid shots. One man clapped hands to his face, screamed shrilly like a child and pitched to the earth, his pigtail swung up in the air as hought it had been a black whiplash.

of terror and excitement had flashed away my mind was beginning to work with craft and counting. Ahead of me and running athwart my course was a muddy wallow they called the read and, which our troops had passed along burely three hours before to the capture of the village. To the left were the French lines and safety, in front, and a ball's throw beyond the road, was the yellow tyrbid stream of the river.

It was impossible to reach the campeven had I risked it. The Black Flags had anticipated the move and had detailed off a party to outfank me in that direction. By turning off to the right I might very well bring down the enemy upon our expeditionary fonce on their march back from the village. They might be prepared to receive them, and again they might not, and I would have died ten times sconer than any move of mine for my own safety should bring disaster on my comrades. DON'T SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN.

DON'T SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 16 years of age. Last summer I met a man six years my senior whom I have learned to love dearly, and know that my love is reciprocated. My father was opposed to him, and insulted him, which he took like a man, and I was forbidden to speak to him. I had not spoken to him for about three weeks, and one day I met him. Breaking my father's command, I spoke to lim, and found we love each other dearly. I speak to a number of other men, but I find that I couldn't love any as I love him.

TRUSTFUL.

You are only 16 and your father The "Woman's Court," inaugurated in Chicago, has proved a great suc-cess. YOU ARE VERY FOOLISH.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 18 and about three months ago met a young man who called on me frequently, and I thought he cared for me. One evening he made an appointment but never came. On the following day he sent word he had gone on a distant business trip for an indefinite stay. I found his so-called "trip" was a falsehood. He did not offer an apology, but said he would tell me some time later. He saw me home that evening and made enother appointment, but when the time came he sent a note saying he could not come and offered a fairly good excuse. He made another appointment for a week later, but he never came. In spite of all, I love him still.

HEARTBROKEN.

If you permit this man to make another appointment with you, you will deserve the neglectful treatment you are receiving.

TIME WILL AID YOU.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: Recently I returned to my home town, and while there most of my time was spent with the girl dearest to me. Some of the town boys, who were envious of me, did their best to put me in a false light. They succeeded in doing so as far as her mother is concerned. The consequence is that I am not allowed to visit at her house any more. T. P. C. her house any more. T. P. C.

This is unfortunate, but so long as the girl remains true you have no cause for worry. Conduct yourself in such a way the mother will be convinced she has been unjust to you. No pleading, no argument, no intervention of friends will help you as much as your own good conduct.

A MATTER OF NO MOMENT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am 16 and was going with a boy the same age. The other day he sent me a letter, and my father would not give it to me. I wrote and told the boy not to write me any more letters and I would state why the next time I saw him.

I have not heard of him since.
Do you think I hurt his feelings?
E. F. G.

Your father was right, I am sure, and the young man should not blame you for an obedience which is really both rare and commendable. You said you would explain when you saw him. If he avoids you, it is ewident he doesn't care for the explanation.

Bryan's Narrow "Little Navy" Policy the Cause of His Visit to California.

The selection of Mr. Bryan to visit California and persuade the disens there to abandon the exercise of their sovereign rights and to bow timorously and obsequiously before the threats of Japan is

The reason that Californians are asked to give up their rights in order to pacify Japan, and to sacrifice their interests and the interests of the country at large in order to please the Japanese, is because we have no sufficient navy, and the main reason that we have no sufficient navy is because Mr. Bryan has exerted his influence among his unthinking followers in the Democratic House to prevent the country from having a sufficient navy.

This visit to California, therefore, will give Mr. Bryan an opportunity to demonstrate to the country the advantages of his peace-at-any-price policy. It will give him a conspicuous chance to establish his superiority in wisdom and patriotism to George, Washington, who said:

"To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual methods." of preserving peace.

Mr. Bryan is noted for his eloquence, if for nothing else, and it will take considerable eloquence to prove that war is cheaper than a reasonable naval insurance against war, and to convince the citizens of California that Abraham Lincoln was wrong when he said:

"One half day's cost of this war would pay for all the slaves. in Delaware at $400 a head."

It will take quite a flow of oratory to convince the citizens of the country generally that the proper American policy is to save a few dollars in the building of ships and sacrifice our independence, our self-respect and our actual interests as a nation.

It is fortunate that Charles Coatesworth Pinckney, statesman and partiot, is no longer alive to learn from the Democrats of today how poorly he represented the American spirit when he replied to the demands of Napoleon's Minister that the motto of America was "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute."

To-day, at least among the Democrats of America, there are no millions for defense, but there is a pitiful disposition to pay tribute in consideration and concession to any demands that an insolent foreign nation may urge.

In Ambassador Pinckney's time the United States had about one-third the territory that it now possesses and about one-twentieth of the population.

It was smaller in men, but larger in manhood. It was smaller in size, but larger in independence and honor. It was lesser in wealth, but greater in courage.

For Ambassador Pinckney was not speaking for a nation of a hundred millions to a nation of less than half that number. He was speaking for a scant five million of plain American citizens, and asserting his independence and theirs in the face of the greatest military nation of that time, and of the greatest military leader

But courage and determination more than made up for lack of numbers and lack of wealth, and Talleyrand accepted Pinckney's defiance and abandoned France's insulting demands.

Even in our day courage and conscience count for more than size. Little Montenegro is one of the smallest nations in the world. Yet all the powers of Europe, with their fleets concentrated at its shore, could not make it abandon what it believed to be right. King Nicholas, of Montenegro, in spite of the threats of the powers, prosecuted the siege of Scutari until he took the city.

And withal little Montenegro is so small upon the map and the rest of Europe is so large. In view, then, of our own American experience and from our observation of the achievements of other nations reliant upon right, it would seem that the size of a country is not so important as the size of the men it has at its head.

"TEACH US TO PRAY"

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

TEACH us to pray; 'Tis dark o'er all the world, And over land and sea the mists close down, Out in the darkness hopelessly we stray, And search-and can not find again our way. O God! teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray; We are not worthy, Lord; For we have dwelt long years in sin and shame, We closed our eyes and would not see the way; And now 'tis vain-for hopelessly we stray. O God! teach us to pray, Teach us to pray, For this cannot be prayer Which comes but as the cry of hearts of fear. We are poor trembling mortals gone astray-If it be not too late to find Thy way. O God! teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray, For everywhere is gloom. And sudden terror seizes on our hearts. A bitter knowledge comes to us to-day: We are world-weary sinners far astray. O God! teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray, We would but speak with Thee. Our hearts are full of what but Thou couldst understand, And we are tired children far astray. We seek the light of Thine Eternal Way. Dear God, teach us to pray.

Teach us to pray-Yet this itself is prayer From hearts of troubled pilgrims learning peace, " Grant us but strength to go along Thy Was. We are Thy little children who did stray, Lo! ere we sleep-we pray!

If You Should Live 100 Years

If you should be alive 100 years from to-day, no doubt you will be able to see sights in the United States like the above. Here you see the great, tall buildings of the future, so tall that the giant skyscrapers of to-day, one of which boasts of a height of 750 feet, would appear but a pigmy compared to the skyscraper of the future with its more than 100 stories. You may be sure that when buildings such a sare pictured above become a reality, the airship willthen be as common as the trolleys

American Genius Has Given the World Its Greatest Wonder

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

N antiquity it was said that there were seven wonders of the world, headed by the great Pyramids of Egypt.

In the Middle Ages the list of world's wonders was changed throughout, and then it started with the Collseum of Rome.

To-day, if we should revise the list once more, there can be no doubt as to what would stand at the head-it would be the Panama Canal,

In order to be accepted as a "wonder," any work of man must make a particular kind of appeal to the imagination. That it excites admiration is not enough; it must also awaken the feeling that in creating it man has taken a step forward, beyond the line of his previous achievements,

What Nature Has Done.

Regarded in this way, the Panama Canal is without a rival, as the intense interest shown by the entire world in its approaching

For the first time in his history man has directly joined two oceans, the greatest on the globe, 88 N. Pryornus he has cut two former works sink into relative insignificance.

If some new Herodotus were to go wandering through our modern world in search of marvels he would, on arriving at Panama, find no words strong enough to express his amazement. He would exclaim that the Amerleans had defied the gods by changing their arrangement of the face of the earth!

In order to understand what the Panama Canal means as an example of human interference with geography, we must look at what nature had done on the same spot. For this purpose take a map showing the Central American and West Indian region, with indications of the depth of water on both sides, and a raised chart, like Mr. Gray's, exhibiting a bird's-eye view of the line of the canal across the isthmus.

Thus you will perceive that, in some long past period, broad, though very irregular, necks of land probably connected the two Americas, joining many of the islands to the mainland, both north and south. The Gulf of Mexico was once nearly isolated. ike h great lake, and there were other large lakes where the Carib-

Afterward there was a sinking, separating the islands from the continental shore, and leaving only the narrow isthmus to connect North and South America.

Two Oceans United by Man.

For ages this condition has per sisted, and it is doubtful if the two continents have ever been completely cut apart, at least since the cretaceous age. More likely the rocky spine of the isthmus has always connected them, whatever other changes may have occurred. If this be so, it is evident that, in making the Panama Canal, we have interfered with an original arrangement of Nature. We have taken two oceans which she had separated and united them by a waterway. That waterway, to be sure, is a mere thread, and we have had to elevate much of it above sea level (which Nature could not have done), but it serves our purpose, and does it without upsetting any of Nature's broader designs. If the whole isthmus were swept away the Gulf Stream would probably be diverted, and a climatic catastrophe might fall upon northwestern Europe, if not upon North America itself. It will be just 400 years next silent upon his "peak in Darien," saw the glitter of the Pacific and thus knew that there was another great ocean west of America.

He, and others after him, looked for a natural waterway between those oceans, but the possibility of making such a way could not have occurred to him, and he certainly had no foresight of the mighty nation that was to arise in the north, composed of a different race from his, and destined, in so short a time, to link the ocean behind him with that which he saw far ahead.

No More to Discover.

The age of discovery of new habitable lands, capable of becoming the seats of new empires, is past. We now know the whole earth, as Nature made it, having seen even its poles, through the eyes of brave explorers. It only remains for us to complete its conquest by making it fitter for our habitation.

The Panama Canal is the first gigantic stride taken in this new conquest. American genius and enterprise have achieved it unaided. We have paid its cost in lives and treasure; let him beware who would deprive us of the fruit of our toil and sacrifice!

South Criticising Itself.

It means that the South intends to make an end of outside fault finding by undertaking itself all the fault finding that is necessary. Southern conditions of one kind and another have been the subject of a good deal of disabroad. Injurious impressions about the South have gone out over the world.

The Southern Sociological Congress means that Southern men are addressing themselves to Southern conditions and that the unselfish patriotism is to be concentrated upon all the social problems of the Southern States. The old protest-"Let the South alone"-may now cease. The South is not going to let her-

It will be again of incalculable truth about ourselves and see it whole. None of the conditions which need remedy can be dealt with effectively so long as they are considered merely individual

The slogan of the congress is "A Solid South for a Better Nation." That is a solidity of Southern society which peculiar ly invites the sociological lever. We are a morally inflammable people. The resolution of improvement can be invoked for a general contagion of progress.

A good straight look at the Southern field sociologically, for instance, will show our weakness clearly in relation to our strength, There are 30,000,000 people, but they are not all safely civilized. From the standpoint of the sociologist-and this is the standpoint of the truth-the South is ten million strong and not far from twenty million weak.

There are 10,000,000 people who represent the intelligence, the thrift and the progressiveness of the Southern States, but there are 10,000,000 white people-and Anglo-Saxon at that-who, on account of illiteracy and unsocialized natural intelligence, are suffering the penalties of backward-

Optimism With Motive.

The characteristic of the Sociological Congress is optimism with a motive. Those who stand outside and criticise the South do not do us any good, and, indeed, can Grover Cleveland said: "Those who stand next to the burden are alone able to lift it." When a man finds fault with himself there is hope of practical repentance.

Southern men believe in the South. They believe that its resources justify a radiant vision. These resources of material wealth in soil and climate, in mind and field, are world assets.

Our resources of human nature are generous and courageous We constitute the great American reserve of the unmixed republican stock of jealous Anglo-Saxonism

There is nothing going on below the Mason and Dixon line that appeals quite as much to fundamental patriotism as the beginnings of constructive criticism realized and foreshadowed in the Southern Sociological Congress.

No Molecule Ever Rests By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN.

OLECULES are composed of atoms; and, of course, the least number that can form an atom is evidently two, and the number varies greatly from the molecules of rare gas to dense solids. But no molecule within the entire range of human experience is at rest. Put very fine particles in water, put a small drop of the water under the lenses of a very high power microscope and examine. The particles move rapidly and in many directions. Thus a particle will move on a short straight line and then turn abruptly, not in a curved or round corner, but sharp. angular turns will be made again and again, the path being zigzag.

When the phenomenon was discovered in 1827 by Brown the motions were named Brownian motions in his honor. But the microscopes used by him would be in the "ash heap" now, or in a museum of curios. The present day microscopes are instruments of very remarkable power.

Brownian Motions.

The Brownian motions have been studied by many able physicists. At first investigators thought that the mysterious motions were caused by slight inequalities in temperature in the little drop of water. This was disproved. The motions were apparently self-caused, and continuous, no rest. Thus the smaller the particles suspended in the liquid, the faster they moved. Finally they used particles to the limit of their magnifying power, and ments ever increased with de-

All kinds of liquids were used to sustain the floating and flying things. No explanation of the motions was made;, still men could scarcely believe that they moved of themselves. Then came the very wonderful new ultra-violet energy-ray microscope, and new methods of applying rays to the flying bodies. All was now animation in laboratories; the limit of all power of seeing was reached; and it. seemed that the very interiors of the particles could be reached. New kinds of liquids were discovered and used, and new kinds of excessively minute particles suspended. They all moved; but new rates, new speeds were dis-

Then another new plan was tried; fine metals, as silver, were torn apart by electricity into dust of silver so fine as to be beyond imagination. These were put into liquids, and specific speeds were

Then an unheard-of experiment was made-the extremely small fragments of silver were floated in gas. They moved faster than ever and in far longer paths before turning. The great discovery was made; they do not move of themselves, but are carried along hither and thither by the original invisible molecules of the liquids and gases. These move perpetually.
